Dear PhD-students, would you like to accompany and supervise a small group of interested students in all phases of the research process, while also pursuing your own research interests and developing your skills in research-oriented teaching? Then FOLL is the right place for you. The "Research-oriented Teaching and Learning" program is aimed at Bachelor's students (the participation of 1/3 Master's students possible) and enables them to research a topic of their choice in a team and supervised by a teacher for a semester and to present the results to the university public at the end of the project. In addition to the project work in the subjects, the Section for Teaching and Learning in Higher Education offers exchange meetings and workshops for teachers and students. FoLL is announced every semester; the application deadline for the SoSe 25 is 16.03.25. On 15.05.25, five teams from this WiSe will present their results from 6 pm in the Adam-von-Trott-Saal. A warm welcome!
